What happened to them? I'm all about watching youtube videos and I go to youtube for that. I can watch you tube videos on my netbook. I have one person that I play game sessions with and we play from you tube. What the fuck happened to playonscripts.com? They used to be great. Now what the fuck? agony1993 Yeah. It has it's pros and cons. I don't have access to the outside world, but that's okay. It works as long as I don't have any kinks to work out. A server that can hold 12 servers on is nice. I can have my personal server, my gaming server and my private server up and running. It does a bit of forwarding to minimize bandwidth used. I can play over the internet, if I want to. It's a good setup. As far as I can tell, the internet goes out from time to time. It will go out for days at a time. During those times, I can still play, but with a lot of lag. It's actually a pretty decent setup. I can play several games at the same time, so I can play while it's down. There are times where my internet is gone for hours, but I can still play, but it's not good. I can still play but the connection is slow and sluggish. It's pretty much unusable for that. But my apartment's internet seems to go out every night around 10-11pm. But during the day, it's fine. I'm pretty good with just not working. I've found that I can still play, even if the internet goes out for hours at a time. It's a good setup. I'm just making sure that I have everything setup in a way that works for me. I don't have internet in my apartment. I just have it in my building. I have the internet in my building, but when I'm at work, it goes out. I had to set up my server at my house because of that. But it's a good setup. I'm not sure how long I can use this. The main reason why I set up a server is so that I can play on it when it goes out. I don't like playing with lag. I've tried out many game servers and I've never really found one that worked. The one that worked for me was the Free Geeks game server. It's a 82157476af
